PACCR: Progress Report

On-site reviews of three Departments with widely differing emphases have recently been completed. The Unit Review Committees for the Departments of Microbiology, Rural Economy, and Romance Languages are shown in the accompanying photographs.

A general objective of the President's Advisory Committee on Campus Reviews is to set up and maintain conditions that will achieve the maximum positive results. The first step in the review process is a self-study by the Department. A Unit Review Committee is then activated to:

- (1) assess the material in the report arising out of the self-study;
- (2) carry out an on-site visit; and
- (3) prepare its own report, to which the unit will normally have an opportunity to respond.

Members of a Unit Review Committee are chosen with two main characteristics in mind: (1) achievement of a high level of excellence in their field; and (2) demonstrated common sense and trusted judgment. Two of the members are from the discipline and external to the University, one is from a related discipline within the University, and one is from the University at large. Although each is expected to exercise mature judgment about all aspects involved in a review, individual contributions to the committee deliberations will differ in emphasis. Since the external members bring knowledge of what constitutes mature scholarship in the specialization, they can be expected to be concerned primarily with the quality of the staff and the specialized nature of the work.

The internal (related) member brings special ability to interpret the particular setting and the development of the Department as it is at The University of Alberta. The University-at-large member can act in certain respects as a representative of the wider University community.

Each of the three committees shown here spent two days on campus. Approximately one-third of the time was spent interviewing those outside the Department; one-third in the Department consulting with staff, graduate students, and undergraduate students; and one-third in committee discussion. The committee's reports are expected to be received during the next few weeks.

On behalf of the University, the President's Advisory Committee on Campus Reviews wishes to acknowledge and thank the members, and particularly the Chairmen, of the Departments of Microbiology, Rural Economy, and Romance Languages for their willingness to be among the first units for review, and thereby to render special assistance in the development of the review process on this campus.

The members of the three Unit Review Committees are as follows:

Microbiology

External reviewers:

- R.R. Colwell, Professor of Microbiology, University of Maryland.
- R.S. Wolfe, Professor of Microbiology, University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign.

Internal-related:

- L.P. Milligan, Professor of Animal Science.

University-at-Large:

B.W. Wilkinson, Professor of Economics.

Rural Economy

External Reviewers:

J.A. Brown, Dean of Agriculture, University of Saskatchewan.

G.L. Johnson, Professor of Agricultural Economics, Michigan State University.

A. Platt, former President of United Farmers of Alberta.

Internal-related:

W.D. Gainer, Professor of Economics and Associate Dean of Graduate Studies and Research.

University-at-large:

J.R. Nursall, Professor of Zoology.

Romance Languages

External Reviewers:

L.L. Bongie, Professor and Head, Department of French, University of British Columbia.

F. Martinez-Bonati, Professor and Chairman, Department of Spanish and Portuguese, Columbia University.

Internal-related:

T.M.S. Priestly, Associate Professor and Chairman, Department of Slavic Languages.

University-at-large:

C.R. Stelck, Professor of Geology. □*

British Universities Threatened

How do Vice-Chancellors and Principals of Britain's universities describe their government's latest policy on public expenditure? According to a statement released on 12 March by Sir Alec Merrison, Chairman of their Committee, the policy is "profoundly misguided," "extraordinary," "a kind of madness," and "a destructive onslaught." The Committee of Vice-Chancellors and Principals is not normally so vehement in its attacks on government policy but for once it seems that the very fabric of British university life is under threat.

In 1980-81, British universities labored under what was termed, ephemerically, "level funding." In 1981-82, they will sustain a real 3½ percent cut. By 1983-84, if cuts outlined in a recent Public Expenditure White Paper (Cmnd 8175) are put into effect, they stand to suffer a loss of income of gigantic proportions, perhaps as high as 15 percent—$350 to $400 million.

"The government," according to Sir Alec, "now intends to run down the British university system by about one-eighth over the next two years . . ." Pointing out that it is a mistake to prejudice the country's future supply of highly skilled and educated people, Sir Alec acknowledged the British government's ability to dictate the level of activity in UK universities, which are, in theory at any rate, private institutions. "But if," Sir Alec continued, "it is their [the policy makers'] intention to reduce substantially that activity, then they are setting about it so clumsily as to guarantee the maximum amount of damage for a minimum saving."

That damage will indeed be great in personal terms never mind about the future of Britain's higher educational system. It is envisaged by Peter Willby, Education Correspondent for The Sunday Times (15 March 1981), that about 3,000 university teachers may soon face redundancy. (The salary component in UK universities' budgets is about 72 percent of which 38 percent is devoted to academic wages.) The British government, however, is obviously prepared for such a contingency and has set aside some $54 million for redundancy payments.

Rumors also appear to be circulating about a possible "hit list." Perhaps the government will attempt to reduce public expenditure by merely shutting down one or even two universities. The Manchester Guardian (14 March 1981) suggests the possibility is remote but goes on to speculate which institution might succumb. "Will it be a fashionable red den (Essex with its sociology?) or an unfashionable redbrick (Leicester?)."

Simply put, it seems that the UK's latest "austerity" policy will promote, as Diana Keddes suggests (The Times, 12 March 1981), the "disintegration into chaos" of Britain's university system.*

"Conjugate a sentence."

Some students do not know what this means or how to do it, according to Adrian Kennedy, Head of the Journalism Program at Grant MacEwan Community College. The remark was made at a recent workshop hosted by the Canadian Public Relations Society on 23 March at the Edmonton Plaza Hotel.

Mr. Kennedy was addressing the problem of students who apply for entry to his program but possess an inadequate knowledge of English grammar. □

Money Transfusion for Nursing Research

In recent days Dame Fortune has smiled dazzlingly on the Faculty of Nursing. First of all, an anonymous donor came forward with a cheque for $10,000 for nursing research. A short while later, the same person repeated the generous act. The $20,000 is the largest private donation for nursing research received in Alberta. It is a boon to the Faculty which wants to proceed with a number of research projects including one on pain, something that nurses are in an advantageous position to study as they are with hospitalized patients on a continuous basis. Research has been done to probe the qualities of pain experienced by patients and to explore the relationships between qualities of pain and other variables such as anxiety and depression. Additional research is deemed necessary to find ways of measuring the various types of pain in a consistent and meaningful way.

Nursing research in Canada began in earnest in 1950 but it soon became evident that funding was not going to keep pace with the initiative of the researchers. Over the years, says the Alberta Association of Registered Nurses (AARN), much of the work that has been done has been carried out on shoestring budgets provided by graduate students, Faculties of Nursing within the universities and by nurses themselves.

One of the principle problems, the Association says, is that nursing is neither recognized nor named as a discipline singled out for support within the terms of reference of funding agencies such as the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council.

There are some breakthroughs, for example, the Government of Alberta's recent decision to establish a nursing research trust fund of $1 million over the next five years. The first $200,000 will be available for 1981-82. Some of the areas to be investigated include practices of nursing care delivery; innovative nursing education systems; the retention of nurses in the work force, including job enhancement and professional development; and the changing role of nursing in Alberta's health care system.

Shirley Stinson, Professor in the Faculty of Nursing and President of the Canadian Nurses Association, says that nursing research is gaining momentum in Canada and that Alberta is in a position to spearhead such research if adequate financing can be realized as necessary.

At a news conference held on 24 March, the AARN made an announcement of import to many people including Faculty of Nursing personnel. The AARN contends that the key structural priority for the development of nursing research in the province is a universities-based organizational unit which will carry out nursing research investigation, nursing research training, nursing research consultation, and nursing research communication.

It is proposed that the unit be called the Alberta Nursing Research Institute and that it be jointly developed by the Universities of Alberta and Calgary.

The AARN is holding talks with the two universities to determine their support and cooperation for the proposed plan. If commitment in principle is received, a proposal will then be forwarded to government requesting funding. □

Medical Research Funds On the Up and Up

On 19 March in Ottawa, the Hon. Monique Begin, federal Health and Welfare Minister, surprised the bulk of Canada's medical establishment with the announcement that the Medical Research Council (MRC) will receive an increase of 22.3 percent over its current budget. This will bring the MRC's funds for the new fiscal year to a total of $100.2 million. In addition, Madame Begin explained at the press conference that the "Consumer Price Index" is not a suitable yardstick when inflation in the cost of research is considered—not a startling revelation perhaps, but certainly a welcome recognition of the facts of life on the part of the federal government.

René Simard, President of the MRC until he was succeeded yesterday by Pierre Bois, is reported to have received the announcement at the press conference with a "broad smile." According to a news release issued jointly by the Canadian Federation of Biological Societies and the Canadian Association of University Teachers, Dr. Simard said that the funds would be used to replace out of date research equipment, to support additional new grant applications, and to fund a variety of training and research programs in areas of particular concern to Canada. Such areas might be perinatology, gerontology and reproductive physiology. He stressed, however, that the MRC Council will be the final arbiter for the allocation of the funds and not administrative staff or parliamentarians.

The Executive Secretary of the CAUT, Donald Savage, was equally pleased with the announcement and expressed the hope that the increased support for biomedical research might be an indication of the federal government's commitment to research and development and to our country's universities generally. At the time of writing, the government's support for the two other major agencies, the Natural Sciences and Engineering Research

Professor of Nursing, Shirley M. Stinson (right) and President Horowitz (left) at the time when the private donations were received.

Council and the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council, had not been made public. The President of the SSHRCC, however, André Fortier, did not exude optimism when he addressed a gathering at The University of Alberta last fall.

Another continuing concern at present is the proposed review of the Established Programmes Financing Act. While congratulating the government and, in particular Madame Begin and Dr. Simard, Dr. Savage said that "it is of utmost importance that the federal government ensures that [it] does not sabotage [its] own efforts to stimulate research and development in this country by reducing the support of universities through means such as the EPF Act." □

Riding on a Bed of Air

The 15th Canadian Symposium on Air Cushion Technology is to be held from 28 to 30 September 1981 at the Park Plaza Hotel in Toronto. The Canadian Air Cushion Technology Society, therefore, has issued a call for papers with a deadline for receipt of abstracts of 15 May 1981.

Air cushion technology, especially as it relates to hovercraft, is an up and coming field of interest even here in Alberta. According to a recent newsletter of the NRC Research Group on Air Cushion Technology, a cable hoverferry experiment undertaken by the provincial government in collaboration with the National Research Council at La Crete has been completed and the craft is now owned totally by the NRC. The craft will probably be moved to a site in northern Ontario for further service.

Other users of hovercraft in Canada include the Coast Guard, people travelling the Simpson highway where it crosses the Nelson River in British Columbia, Agriculture Canada, and James Bay Travel in Moosonee, northern Ontario.

For further information about the symposium mentioned above, please write to the CACTS, Saxe Building, 60-75 Sparks Street, Ottawa, Ontario K1P 5A5. □

Volunteer Recognition Week

The current week, 28 March to 3 April, has been formally recognized by President Horowitz, as "Volunteer Recognition Week." Those who work with volunteers feel that it is their responsibility to inform the public that volunteers are as busy as ever. An increasing awareness of human needs has been accompanied by an increase in the number of people willing to make an effort to fill those needs.

Not many years ago, the idea of advocacy for the disabled was unheard of; counselling to comfort accused criminals was given only during lawyer's available time; elderly people who could not get to the library simply stopped reading; and children of immigrants struggled along in school as best they could. Advocates, court workers, visitors with library books, and tutors are only a few of the specialized volunteers who have come forward in recent years to perform those tasks previously done by the family or left undone.

Volunteers' horizons are widening as never before, and it is this fact that the public needs to know. The pressing need for more volunteers is a reflection of the optimistic belief held by an increasing number of people that we are indeed our brothers' keepers. Perhaps this is why, in our complicated modern world, in areas of human need, volunteers are making their presence felt, and are still increasingly needed. □

The Gifted: Accent the Positive

"The Gifted: Accent the Positive" is the title of a conference to be held on the campus on 1 and 2 May. Sponsored by the Edmonton Public School Board and the Edmonton Chapter of the Ontario-based Association for Bright Children, the aim of the conference is to review the opportunities available to such children in their educational and general development.

There will be some twenty-six sessions dealing with such topics as "Mind Qualities and Gifted Youth," "Right/Left Brain Functions," "Myths of Testing," "Teaching for Thinking," and a whole host of other matters. Perhaps one of the most interesting addresses will follow supper on Friday, 1 May, at 7:30 p.m. This address, to be given by George Robb, will have as its title "Who Really are the Gifted?"

Opening remarks at the conference will be delivered by Penny Christensen, Conference Chairman; Harold Cartledge, President of the ABC's Edmonton Chapter; Joan Cowling, EPSB Trustee; and the Hon. Dave King, Alberta Education.

Attendance at the conference, to be held in the Education Building, is by pre-registration only. It will be limited to 350 people. The fees are $50 for practising teachers and educators, $18 for ABC parent members, and $20 for non-member parents and students. The fees include entry to all sessions, refreshments, and the Friday evening wine and cheese social to follow George Robb's address. Applications for registration should be sent to Dr. Christensen before 15 April. Her address is 11 Quesnell Drive, Edmonton, Alberta T5R 5N1.

Membership in the Association for Bright Children is open to anyone interested in the welfare of bright children, whether or not a parent of such children. The Edmonton Chapter of the Association arranges regular meetings with speakers and discussion, issues a newsletter, and organizes extra-curricular "peer group" sessions outside school hours. The cost of a family membership (parents and children) is $10 annually. Membership may be obtained by applying to Dr. Christensen (at the address given above, telephone 436-5758) or Mr. Cartledge (telephone 435-3114). □

Our First Home Celebrates 75th Anniversary

The first home of The University of Alberta, the Queen Alexandra School, was seventy-five years old last February. Opening its doors on 5 February 1906, the Duggan Street School, as it was named initially, first received students transferred from the Niblock Street School. Later in the same year, on 6 May, the Legislative Assembly at its first session passed a bill authorizing the establishment of a University. Just over two years later, in September 1908, the Duggan Street School opened its doors to the first University students in Alberta.

Today, the Queen Alexandra School (so named in 1910 in honor of the Queen consort) still serves its original purpose. The assembly hall, used as a classroom by the University students, is now the school library. H.M. Tory's office just off the assembly hall is now the office of a secretary. The door to our first President's office remained at the school until 1958 when, still bearing its University designation, it was donated to our institution in commemoration of its first fifty years.

The culmination of a full year's celebration of the Queen Alexandra School's anniversary will be an open house on the evening of 29 April. Staff, students and alumni of the school are most interested in receiving historical information and anecdotes about the earlier years of the school and our first home for presentation and display at the open house. People who wish to attend, or would like to lend or contribute materials for display on 29 April, are urged to contact the Principal, Jim Ferguson, at 439-2516. □

Foreign Student Policy Commission

The Canadian Bureau for International Education (CBIE) has established a Commission on Foreign Student Policy. The Commission, established by a 1980 decision of CBIE's Board of Directors, will study the direction and content of Canadian institutional policy on foreign students, in order to make recommendations to Canadian universities and colleges, and to federal and provincial governments, about appropriate future policies related to foreign students.

Among the questions to be considered by the Commission are: How should foreign students be selected? Should universities and colleges seek to manage the international mix of their foreign students, either by restricting admissions from some parts of the world or by encouraging more students to apply from under-represented regions? What part should education in Canada play in our foreign aid programs? What benefits and costs do foreign students bring to Canadian institutions? What is the appropriate division of responsibilities between governmental and institutional decision-makers?

CBIE's Commission begins with the belief that international contact through the reception of foreign students can bring benefits to Canadian education. CBIE, however, does not necessarily advocate an unrestricted open-door policy. The Commission was established on the assumption that Canada's institutions will be inclined to make more educationally sound and less politically-motivated decisions on foreign students policies that will governments. Also, institutions have it within their power and competence to establish most of the necessary policies. The Commission members were nominated by CBIE and by the national and regional associations of universities and colleges. The Commission's chairman is Owen Carrigan, former President of St. Mary's University in Halifax and currently Professor of History at that university. The other members come from universities and colleges across Canada. Among them is John Haar, President of Grant MacEwan Community College here in Edmonton.

When the Commission's draft report is prepared, it will be circulated for comment to organizations across Canada, including national and regional student, faculty and administrative organizations, departments of federal and provincial governments, diplomatic representatives in Canada, and secondary school teachers' and trustees' associations.

As it prepares its report the Commission will both conduct research and assemble comparative data from the wealth of research on foreign student matters which has been done in other countries. In Canada, CBIE has already surveyed all universities and colleges on their own policies, and has studied the situation of foreign students in secondary schools. A study on the economic costs and benefits of foreign students will be prepared for the Commission and published by CBIE along with the Commission's report. The Commission will meet between now and the summer of 1981, and its report should be available in the fall of this year. □

Qualitative Research: A Graduate Student Seminar

What is research? The question seems so obvious as not even to merit an answer, but it is one asked increasingly in university circles, particularly in departments related to education. Traditionally, research in education has tended to be statistically-based and oriented to the testing of hypotheses. A recent tendency, however, has been the investigation of other kinds of research, and the assumption that the researcher ought to follow the anthropologist rather than the physical scientist. To this end, educational researchers have stressed inner understanding; the exploration of roles and language used, for example, in school classrooms; and a close relationship between the researcher and his subject. The term used to describe such research is "qualitative research."

A graduate seminar on this subject will be held at The University of Alberta from 3 to 6 May 1981. The subject of the seminar is qualitative research and its application to educational administration, though attention will be given to its application to research in education in general. Speakers include Harry Wolcott, from the University of Oregon; Egon Guba, from the University of Indiana; and Valerie Janesick, from the State University of New York. The conference will begin with a reception hosted by President Myer Horowitz. Most seminar sessions will be informal and small-group discussions will be emphasized. On the final day of the seminar a "bearpit" session will be held on quantitative and qualitative research, to be chaired by Reno Bosetti of Alberta Advanced Education and Manpower.

The seminar is being planned by graduate students, primarily from the Department of Educational Administration at this University. Led by graduate student David Bird, the planning committee is piecing together the formal program and a social program and organizing accommodation for visitors, most of whom will be able to stay with graduate students. The conference will be funded by the Department of

New Chairman for Art and Design

Jorge Frascara has been appointed Chairman of the Department of Art and Design for a five-year term effective from 1 July 1981.

A native of Buenos Aires, Argentina, Professor Frascara gained a Diploma in Art and a Post Diploma in Art Education from the Escuela Nacional de Bellas Artes in Argentina. Before coming to Canada in 1976, he worked for a number of years as a freelance designer and a teacher in his native land. Professor Frascara's first appointment at The University of Alberta was as Visiting Professor. In 1977, he accepted a permanent position here and, in 1979, was promoted to the rank of Associate Professor.

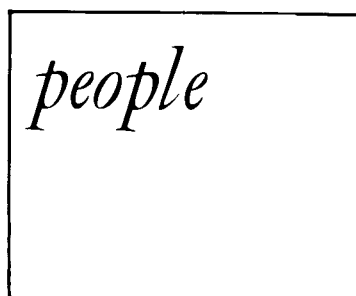

Professor Frascara has been a graphic design consultant to The University of Alberta Press and is a consultant to the Print and Drawing Council of Canada and the International Geographic Union. He is a "working group convenor" for the International Standards Organization and a member of an advisory committee on international standards for the Standards Council of Canada. Professor Frascara is active in the Society of Graphic Designers of Canada and of Alberta. He is Vice-President of the International Council of Graphic Design Associations.

The current Chairman of the Department of Art and Design, J. Freeman, will take a year's leave before returning to his regular duties within the Department. □

Educational Administration, the Faculty of Education, the Universities' Council on Educational Administration and Alberta Advanced Education and Manpower. Graduate students wishing to attend the conference should contact David Bird or Peter West in the Department of Educational Administration. Registration fee is $15. □*

*This note was contributed by Peter West.

Desmond Brown, a PhD student in the Department of History, presented a paper on 28 February at the Conference on Canadian Legal History at the Osgoode Hall Law School. The paper was titled "Statute Law Revision, Consolidation and Codification: Definitions and Differences."

M.J. Apps, a Research Associate in the Faculty of Pharmacy and Pharmaceutical Sciences, recently presented a seminar at Simon Fraser University on the operation of the SLOWPOKE nuclear reactor at The University of Alberta. Dr. Apps was invited by the Department of Chemistry at SFU because of its serious interest in purchasing such a reactor.

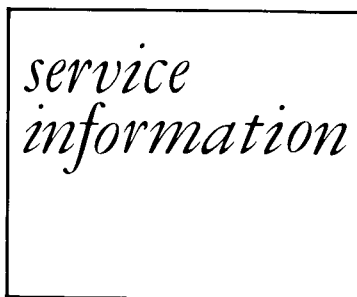

R.B. Wilberg, Physical Education, recently presented papers to the Department of Experimental Psychology of the University of Oxford, to Nonington College of the University of Leeds, and to the London School of Economics. The papers were related to the topics "Pattern Perception in Limited Visual Fields" and "Extrapolations of Game Theory Elements to Game Design."

Department of English, the University of Calgary. He has also accepted an invitation to edit a new series of volumes related to the novelist Thomas Hardy. A Thomas Hardy Annual will be published by Macmillan of London beginning in 1982.

L.C. Green, University Professor, recently lectured on "The Law Concerning Terrorism" and "Trends in Diplomatic Law" at the Faculty of Law, Dalhousie University. He also delivered an address on "Nature and Control of International Terrorism" before the Faculty of Law, the University of Toronto.

Saleem Qureshi, Associate Dean of Arts, delivered an invited lecture on "Islam in the 1980s and the Future of Pakistan" at the University of Minnesota. He also addressed the Islamic Centre of Minneapolis and gave a lecture on "Islam and Islamic Education."

All material to be included under this rubric must reach the Office of Community Relations by 9 a.m. the Thursday before the desired issue of Folio is due to appear. Such information is published according to the dictates of space available. Thus, publication cannot be guaranteed.

Notices

The Gladstone Memorial Library

Scholars of 19th century studies are reminded of the splendid opportunities for research available at St. Deiniol's Library in Hawarden at the family home of the Rt. Hon. W.E. Gladstone.
Now a national memorial to the indefatigable left hand man of Queen Victoria, the library is well stocked and offers a unique service—accommodation at a very reasonable rate (£10 + VAT per day) and full facilities for research and writing. Further information may be obtained from the Warden and Chief Librarian, the Rev. P.J. Jagger, Saint Deiniol's Library, Hawarden, Deeside, Clwyd, UK CH5 3DF. (Hawarden is only seven miles from Chester.)

Visiting Scientists Employment and Immigration Procedures

Effective immediately, Visiting Scientists who hold full-time permanent (tenured) positions at institutions outside Canada are exempt from Employment Canada regulations. They should be treated as Visiting Professors by the Canadian Consulate abroad. Consequently, such people should be issued visitors' visas and employment authorization directly by the Consulate or, in the case of US residents, the port-of-entry authorities. To facilitate entry to Canada, however, it is still suggested that US residents apply to their local Canadian Consulate for a visa.

The policy change may engender some slight confusion on the part of Canadian Consulates abroad and, as a result, it is suggested that Departments engaging "Visiting Professors" contact E.M.
Cherniavsky in the Office of the Associate Vice-President (Academic Administration). Mrs. Cherniavsky is persona grata to officials of Employment and Immigration and she will be able to explain all required or desirable procedures in relation to this matter.

Discounted Air Fares

The following is a summary of discounted air fares available from Air Canada:

(1) a 50 percent discount on all its routes within North America during the period 9 April to 18 June; (2) a discount of 25 to 50 percent on fares for travel within Canada, available throughout the year; and (3) a discount of 30 to 60 percent all year, on direct flights connecting Edmonton with Montreal, Ottawa and Toronto.

At this time, the Office of the Comptroller understands that CP Airlines are matching Air Canada in some areas, and that discounted air fares are available from other airlines with US and European destinations.
Details as to the special conditions covering these special fares can be obtained from the airlines or any competent travel agent.

To encourage the maximum possible use of special air fares, the Office of the Comptroller wishes to clarify that it will interpret the University's travel regulation that travel claims must be "based on the reimbursement of reasonable out-of-pocket expenses necessarily incurred on University business" to cover the minimum stay requirement of discounted air fares by reimbursing the extra cost of accommodation and meals for an extra day or two. This procedure will be followed when it will result in a substantial saving when compared with a normal economy air fare. The penalty for cancelled or altered reservations and the charge for trip cancellation insurance may be claimed as travel expenses.

In addition to the usual travel advance being requested approximately two weeks before the date of departure, a special travel advance may be obtained to meet the prepayment requirement of discounted air fares.
